

Continued...

Process Experts Improve Lean Success

- IEs, with their technical background, are best suited to coach
- Have IE's lead the change and help every employee to think like an IE
- Leadership needs to provide the vision to drive improved performance
- Bottom line focus and leadership resolve are necessary to drive continuous improvement in the organization
- Lean tools and TPS are not the solution to every organization's problems, especially non-automotive companies

We, at OpEx Solutions, have experienced the same issues. Many of our clients and members are now using technical process experts and industrial engineers. This change has led to solving the most crucial problems affecting their bottom line. The industry has rediscovered, partly because of the pressures of the recent economic recession, that involving the doers with traditional IEs is the most effective approach. The faster organizations understand the importance of the above, the quicker they will see significant results on their bottom line.